

PUBLIC HEALTH REPORTS

Journal of the U.S. Public Health Service

Volume 105, No. 3 • May–June 1990 • Published since 1878

EDITORIAL

Communication for better health. 217

SPECIAL SECTION: HEALTH COMMUNICATION FOR THE 1990s

Opportunities for improving the nation's health through collaboration with the mass media 219
Elaine Bratic Arkin

Promoting healthy diets and active lives to hard-to-reach groups: market research study . . . 224
Sara L. White and Susan K. Maloney

Is there a hard-to-reach audience? 232
Vicki S. Freimuth and Wendy Mettger

Past lessons and new uses of the mass media in reducing tobacco consumption 239
Allan C. Erickson, Jeffrey W. McKenna, and Rose Mary Romano

Mass media approaches to reducing cardiovascular disease risk 245
Terry Bellicha and John McGrath

Evaluating women's attitudes and perceptions in developing mammography promotion messages. 253
Carol Schechter, Corinne F. Vanchieri, and Christine Crofton

Using national news events to stimulate local awareness of public policy issues. 257
Rena B. Convissor, Robert E. Vollinger, Jr., and Phillip Wilbur

THE MANY AVENUES OF HEALTH COMMUNICATION 261

Communication planners material available — NCI features program for survivors — Communications teams aid substance abuse prevention — Disease prevention, health promotion office active in health communication — Communication skills for HIV prevention at State and local levels, Cynthia M. Jorgensen — National Center offers health promotion help for older Americans — Cardiovascular information for minorities — CDC's Office on Smoking and Health offers many antismoking publications — American Lung Association specializes in smoke-end strategies and programs

GENERAL ARTICLES

Situational and financial barriers to prenatal care in a sample of low-income, inner-city women 264
Patricia A. St. Clair, Vincent L. Smeriglio, Cheryl S. Alexander, Frederick A. Connell, and Jennifer R. Niebyl

Contents continued